Accompanied by another military policeman, he dashed up to the structure, by now completely enshrouded in flame and billowing smoke, and broke down a locked door. They entered and quickly located two small, panic-stricken Japanese children whom they promptly delivered to safety. Corporal James A. Bailey, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism as a member of the 545th Military Police Company, 1st Cavalry Division, on 5 January 1955, in Sendai, Japan. When a disastrous fire broke out in the city of Nigatake on the evening of that day, Corporal Bailey was assisting in handling spectator traffic around the stricken area when he and a comrade heard the cries of two children from within one of the burning buildings. Although the building was completely enveloped in flames and the billowing smoke was suffocating, he and his contrade, without hesitation and with complete disregard for personal safety, broke open a locked door of the building and ran the risk of being trapped and burned to death to find and carry two small Japanese children to safety. Corporal Bailey's decisive action and exceptional courage in the face of grave danger sayed the lives of the two

Japanese children, earned the deepest gratitude of the Japanese people, and greatly enhanced the prestige of United States forces. His act of heroism reflects great credit on himself and upholds the esteemed traditions of the military service.

Private David G. Benson, , United States Army, a member of Company B, 519th Military Police Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism at Chunchon, Korea, on 3 November 1954. While on duty as a military policeman at Traffic Control Point Number 1, Private Benson heard an explosion in the defile north of Binyon Bridge. He then observed that a Korean bus had plunged off the side of the road into a 30-foot wash and was burning flercely, Leaving his station in charge of a Korean military policeman, he rushed to the scene of the accident and, disregarding the danger to his own life, entered the flaming vehicle to assist in the rescue of passengers trapped in the bus. Despite the intense heat and the fact that many people were jammed under the seats he managed to extricate nine injured and burning people from the blazing wreckage. Private Benson's prompt and courageous action prevented serious injury or possible death to victims of the accident and reflects great credit on himself and the military service.
